The evening, in one paragraph

AGELESS is a cocktail evening at the Capital Club, Lagos, for seventy guests. Mostly Lagos women and men over forty who already spend on how they look and feel, and who have never had the whole subject put in front of them by people who actually know. It is hosted by Medlyfe Wellness and Longevity Centre. It is a conversation, not a sales floor, and the room will be able to tell the difference inside five minutes.

The argument running through the night is that how you feel and how you look are one appointment and not two. The address sets out the range, and the panel turns it into things people can act on.

Where you come in

5:30	Guests arrive. Cocktails. Speakers please be in the room by 6:00
6:30	Welcome from Dr Adedotun Ajelabi, and the opening film
6:35	The range. Dr Ajelabi on what modern medicine can now do about how we age
6:50	The panel, 45 minutes. Chaired by Dr Itunu Akinware
7:35	What you can actually do
7:50	Questions from the room
8:05	Ageless After Hours. Close at 9:30

The panel

The New Science of Ageing Well. What changes in your body, brain and skin after 40, and what you can actually do about it.

Four seats, forty five minutes, which is about nine minutes of speaking each once the chair has done her job. A fifth may join on andropause and men's health. It is experiential rather than clinical: the room wants to know what to do on Monday morning, not what the literature says. Deliver that with the authority of someone who actually knows, which is why you are on the stage and a wellness influencer is not.

On the panel
Dr Timi Adenuga	Metabolism, weight, body composition, and the questions the room has about the new drugs
Gbemi Giwa	Eating the food we actually eat and still changing body composition
Joycee Awosika	Vitality and energy, and what ten years of building a wellness business says about what works
Dr Folake Kofo-Idowu	Menopause, hormone optimisation and preventative women's medicine. What changes after 40, and what is worth measuring

One rule for the panel, and it is the only one that matters. Every answer ends in something a guest can act on. Not a principle, not a caution, something they could begin this week. The chair will come back to anyone who finishes on a generality.

What nobody on this stage may say

This matters more than it sounds, and it is why the briefing exists. Five regulators have an interest in an evening like this and one of them has real teeth.

ARCON requires advertising to be approved before it is seen, carries a minimum fine of five hundred thousand naira, and places the liability on the advertiser rather than the speaker. Anything said from this stage that reads as an advertisement lands on Medlyfe. So: no named prescription products. Not toxins, not fillers, not weight loss drugs by brand. Describe what a class of treatment does if you must, and let people ask privately afterwards.

MDCN treats self advertisement by a doctor as a disciplinary matter. The clinicians on this panel are here to educate, and the clinic is the thing that advertises. In practice that means do not pitch your own practice from the stage. You will be introduced properly and the room will find you at the bar.

No before and after claims, and no outcome promises. Not yours, not anyone's. "Most people see" is a claim. "In my experience, some people find" is an observation. The difference is the whole of it.

Scope of practice is live in Lagos right now. HEFAMAA is actively looking at who may do what. A panel that drifts into who should be allowed to inject becomes a regulatory moment rather than a lively one. The chair has been asked to move the conversation on if it goes there.

None of this makes for a duller evening. The most trusted thing you can do in front of a Lagos audience that has heard every claim already is to be the person who will not make one.

What we need from you

A short bio, eighty to a hundred words, written the way you would want to be introduced from a stage rather than the way a conference programme would do it.

A photograph. Any good headshot you already have. It does not need to be new or formal, only high resolution.

A line on what you want to speak to, if your subject above is not yet set.

These go into the printed programme and to the press, so anything reaching us after Friday 10 October will miss the print.

Practicalities

Capital Club, Lagos. Please be in the room by six, which gives half an hour before the programme to meet the others and see the stage. There is a holding room if you want it.

Dress is cocktail. The room will be dressed.

Microphones are handheld on the panel and lapel for the address. There are no slides and no lectern. If you want a single image behind you, send it with your bio and we will see whether it earns its place.

You are welcome for the whole evening and we would rather you stayed for After Hours than left at half past eight. The conversations that matter to everyone in this room, including you, happen with a drink in hand after the programme ends.

Anything at all, reply to this note.
