A letter from our Founding Partner

To the Tender Committee, The Tony Elumelu Foundation

Thank you for the opportunity to submit this proposal.

I have stood on both sides of the review you are commissioning. In 2016 I founded Doctoora, a health business that started with a plan, a spreadsheet and a short pitch to people who had no reason to believe me. We built it across 21 states and sold it to Evercare. Before that I ran the applicant campaign for a start-up accelerator in the United Kingdom, and since then I have sat on the other side of the table: as a hospital chief executive approving capital, as a board director, and now as the person at Consult for Africa who signs off the financial models we build for founders and investors.

What that has taught me is that a good reviewer is not looking for polish. Many of your strongest applicants will write plainly, in their second or third language, from a market they know better than any reviewer does. The skill is to read through the presentation to the business underneath it: whether the founder understands who pays, what it costs to serve them, and what the seed capital will actually change. A reviewer who rewards fluency over substance will rank the wrong people. We have built our method to prevent that.

We review in English, French and Arabic. We have not proposed Portuguese reviewers, because we would rather tell you so plainly than offer you a thin pool that we could not stand behind.

Our team is senior, and I will personally lead the relationship with your programme team every week. I would welcome the chance to take you through any part of this.

Yours sincerely,

Dr Debo Odulana

Founding Partner, Consult for Africa

1. Our understanding of the assignment

The Foundation is looking for a partner to review and score the business plans, financial projections and pitch videos submitted by entrepreneurs on TEFCConnect, and to return ranked lists that the Foundation can fund from with confidence. The review has to be fair to applicants from every region and language group, consistent from the first file to the last, fast enough to keep pace with the programme calendar, and fully auditable afterwards.

What the Foundation needs	How we meet it	See
Every file scored against the Foundation's own criteria, by a qualified reviewer	Expert reviewers certified on TEF's rubric before they see a live file	3, 4
Consistent scoring across reviewers, languages and weeks	Calibration set, blind double scoring of one file in ten, weekly drift checks	4
Visibility while the review is running	A daily progress report and a standing weekly meeting with your team	6
Applicant data that never leaves the Foundation's control	All work on TEFCConnect, signed confidentiality by every reviewer, access closed at the end	7
A defensible final result	Full methodology, scoresheets and ranked lists handed over at the close	6

2. Why Consult for Africa

Consult for Africa is a management consultancy based in Lagos and Abuja. Our day-to-day work is deciding whether businesses can be financed and run: we build business plans and monthly financial models for founders, test them for the people putting money in, and then often stay to run what has been planned. Most of that work is in healthcare, which is where we started. A good deal of it is not, and the discipline that matters to you is the same in every sector.

We test plans for a living. When a founder brings us a plan, our job is to find out where it is wrong before an investor does. On a recent medical campus project our own measurement of the building showed that a large part of the space the brief counted as lettable was corridor, which moved the payback period and the funding need materially. That instinct, to check the number against the ground, is the core of a good business plan review.

We have built ventures ourselves. Our founding partner built and sold a company, and our pitch and commercial lead conducts due diligence on early-stage African start-ups for an angel network of more than 900 investors. We know what a credible early-stage plan looks like, and how little it needs to say to be credible.

We work across sectors and languages. Alongside our healthcare clients we have structured a multi-sector founder group across education technology, energy, agricultural export and fashion, and priced a direct-to-consumer agricultural business. Our French and Arabic lead has spent nineteen years in leadership roles across North Africa, the Middle East and Francophone Africa.

3. How we will review

The Foundation's criteria come first.

We will score every file against the evaluation rubric the Foundation supplies, exactly as written, on TEFCConnect. We will not substitute our own framework for yours. What we add is the discipline that makes a rubric produce the same answer whichever reviewer holds the file: a written guide to what "Yes" looks like for every question, worked examples at the boundary, and an evidence note against every score so that any result can be traced to the line of the application that earned it.

Stage 1: preparing the first-level review.

Where the Foundation uses enumerators for the first, preliminary pass, we will train them on the agreed framework and criteria before they begin. Training covers the rubric question by question, a set of example applications pre-scored by our leads, and a short certification exercise. An enumerator who does not reach the agreement threshold is retrained before taking live files. We run the sessions in English, French and Arabic.

Stage 2: expert application review.

Applications that pass the first level are read in full by an expert reviewer, who records a score and a one-line evidence note for each criterion. A reviewer working in English spends around 20 minutes on an application, and around 26 minutes in French or Arabic. We have budgeted that time deliberately. It is long enough to read the whole application and short enough to keep the queue moving.

Component 2: business plan, financials and pitch video.

Shortlisted entrepreneurs submit a business plan, financial projections on the Foundation's template and a two to three minute pitch video. We review the three together, because the most useful question at this stage is whether they tell the same story.

Element	What the reviewer tests	Minutes, English	Minutes, French or Arabic
Business plan	Who the customer is and why they will pay; whether the plan is practical with the resources described; what the seed capital buys; the jobs and growth the plan can credibly create	45	58
Financial projections	That the numbers add up; that revenue follows from price and volume the plan describes; that costs include what it takes to deliver; cash in the first twelve months; whether the projections and the narrative agree	30	39
Pitch video	That the founder understands their own business and numbers; clarity, conviction and command; consistency with the written plan	12	16

A plan whose financials assume a price the narrative never mentions, or a pitch that describes a different business from the plan, is noted and scored on that basis. We also flag, for the Foundation's decision rather than our own, files that appear templated, copied from another applicant or duplicated across accounts.

Fairness to the applicant.

Reviewers score the business, not the prose. Our reviewer guide makes this explicit, and our calibration set deliberately includes strong businesses written plainly and weak businesses written well, so that reviewers learn to tell the difference before they score a live file.

Re-review and correction.

Where the Foundation asks for a file to be re-reviewed, or an entrepreneur submits corrections, a second reviewer who did not score the original reads the corrected file against the original notes. Our price includes re-review of up to 10 per cent of Component 2 files, and further re-reviews are charged at the stated per-file rate.

4. Quality assurance and calibration

Our quality system runs before, during and after production, so that the ranked list holds up when the Foundation is asked how it was reached.

When	What we do	What it catches
Before production	Every reviewer scores a calibration set of pre-scored applications in their language and must reach the agreement threshold to be certified	Reviewers who read the rubric differently from the leads
Throughout production	One file in ten is blind double scored by a second reviewer; disagreements beyond a set margin go to a lead for a third read	Individual scoring errors, before they reach the ranked list
Every week	Each reviewer's average score and pass rate are compared with the pool and with their own first week	Drift, fatigue, a reviewer becoming harsher or more lenient over time
Every week	A lead audits a sample of each reviewer's files, including every file near a selection boundary	Errors where they matter most
At the close	Scores are reconciled, outliers re-read, and the ranked lists signed off by the engagement director	A final list we can stand behind line by line

A reviewer who drifts outside tolerance is paused, recalibrated on fresh examples and, if needed, their recent files are re-read. The Foundation sees these numbers every week.

5. Implementation plan

Period	Activity	Output
Week 0	Contract, kick-off with the Foundation's team, TEFCConnect access, confirmation of rubric and volumes, final staffing	Signed confidentiality, agreed plan
Weeks 1 to 2	Reviewer confirmation and onboarding, reviewer guide and calibration sets in three languages, enumerator training, mock review on TEFCConnect	Certified reviewers and enumerators, quality baseline
Stage 2 production, 8 weeks	Expert review of qualifying applications in parallel with the application window; daily reporting; weekly quality review with the Foundation	Scored applications, weekly insight notes
Component 2, 6 weeks	Business plan, financials and pitch video review; re-review cycle	Scored Component 2 files
Close	Reconciliation, final quality audit, handover	Methodology, scoresheets and ranked lists

We will align these periods to the Foundation's programme calendar at kick-off.

Reviewer capacity.

At the volumes we have assumed for pricing, 10,000 Stage 2 applications and 3,000 Component 2 files, the review needs about 6,518 reviewer hours in English and 2,825 in French and Arabic, including double scoring. At 20 hours a week per reviewer, that is a pool of 32 English reviewers and 14 French and Arabic reviewers, 46 in all, drawn from our consultant network and confirmed in the first two weeks. If the Foundation's volumes differ, the pool scales and the per-file rates do not change.

6. Reporting and governance with the Foundation

Our review operations lead sends the Foundation a short progress report every working day: files received, reviewed, in quality review and completed, by stage and language, against the plan. Each week the engagement director and our founding partner meet your team to go through progress, quality numbers, anything escalated, and what the files are telling us about the applicant pool by country, sector and stage of business.

At the close we hand over everything the Foundation's terms ask for: the detailed methodology, the evaluation guide, the complete scoresheets with evidence notes, and the final ranked lists, including lists cut by contributory partner where the Foundation requires them.

7. Data protection and confidentiality

All review work is done on TEFCConnect. We will not download, copy or hold applicant data outside the Foundation's platform. Every reviewer and enumerator signs a confidentiality undertaking before receiving access, and access is granted per person and withdrawn at the close of the engagement or the moment a person leaves the team.

All information we encounter in the course of the assignment remains the property of the Foundation, and we will not use or disclose it for any other purpose without the Foundation's written permission. We handle personal data in line with the Nigeria Data Protection Act 2023. Any suspected breach is reported to the Foundation within 24 hours, with our account of what happened and what we have done about it. Our data and compliance lead owns these controls for the life of the engagement.

9. Relevant experience

Testing a plan before the money goes in.

For Medbury Healthcare Group we built the financial and operating model for a six-business medical campus in Abuja, and the setup plan for a new aesthetics division in Lagos. The work began from the client's own plan and tested it against the ground: we measured the building rather than relying on the brief, rebuilt the monthly cash position, and showed the client a payback period and peak funding need materially different from the figures it started with. The client went ahead on the corrected numbers, and we now support the division's setup and management.

Judging what will convert.

For Aman HMO, a Takaful health insurer expanding into Lagos, we reviewed a growth plan that was not converting and rebuilt it from the data: where the insurer's members actually were, which providers would sign and why, and what the plan needed to cost to work. The engagement has been running since July 2026.

Reading many files fairly, at scale.

We have matched and verified 5,712 specialist doctor records from a national medical association list against our own records, holding ambiguous matches for human review rather than guessing, and we run scored assessments of hospital staff and leaders with written scoring guides and calibration. Both demand what this review demands: the same judgement applied to the thousandth file as to the first, with a record of why.

Beyond healthcare.

We have structured a founder's group across education technology, energy, agricultural export, fashion and eldercare, including the cap table and the funding sequence for each business, and priced the software for a direct-to-consumer agricultural produce business in Lagos.
